Fighting the Fakers: Creativity, Skepticism, and Reinvention in the Digital Age

Description

SF "Sifu Z" Zeigler delivers an unforgettable mix of performance and insight, blending music, magic, martial arts, and technology into a transformative audience experience. From working with James Randi at the Ericsson Group Ergonomics Conference in the 1980s to speaking at The Amazing Meeting 2013, Zeigler has dedicated his career to exposing fakers, celebrating resilience, and unlocking creativity. Now, as a 62-year-old beginner programmer diving into AI, AR, and VR, he brings fresh wisdom on how to question assumptions, embrace simplicity, and find joy in learning—showing audiences how to turn uncertainty into opportunity.

Learning Objectives

- Apply skepticism as a tool for truth and growth.
- Discover the power of simplicity in solving complex challenges.
- Balance discipline and freedom to fuel creativity.
- Cultivate adaptability in uncertain times.
- Experience live music, magic, and martial arts as catalysts for critical thinking.

Speaker Bio

Steven “SF” Zeigler is a martial artist under Grand Master Chris Chan, trained with the Gracie family in Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu, and a lifelong performer in music and magic. He has contributed to the skeptical movement, notably working with James Randi at the Ericsson Group Ergonomics Conference and speaking at The Amazing Meeting 2013 on “Fighting the Fakers.” Today, he merges his rich background with his current journey as a 62-year-old beginner programmer, inspiring audiences worldwide to embrace creativity, resilience, and discovery in the digital age.
